

Robert "Bob" Rivard is a longtime journalist and the director of the Rivard Report, San Antonio's hyperlocal online news and information site. Rivard served as editor of the Express-News for 15 years prior to his retirement in 2011, and previously worked as a senior editor and foreign correspondent for Newsweek magazine and for several Texas newspapers.

He is the author of Trail of Feathers, the nonfiction account of the disappearance and murder of Philip True, the Express-News correspondent in Mexico, and Rivard's four-year pursuit of True's killers through the Mexican justice system.

Rivard is married to Monika Maeckle, a communications consultant and naturalist who writes the national nature blog, The Texas Butterfly Ranch. They have two adult children, both of whom have returned to San Antonio as part of the wave of young professionals attracted to the city's urban growth. Nicolas is a designer at Overland Partners, and Alex is a teacher at Central Catholic High School.
